

Each year, AT&T Labs awards the Science and Technology Medal to acknowledge individuals in AT&T's technical community who have made an outstanding and unique contribution in science and technology in service to AT&T. Each candidate must meet at least one of the following criteria: outstanding technical contributions, technical management and leadership, and technical service in the public domain that brings distinction and honor to AT&T.

2007 Research Medalists:

Balachander Krishnamurthy – Honored for technical leadership and innovation in helping to establish Disciplined Internet and Web Measurement.
