Figure 12.2 The early Internet core router system viewed as a set of routers that connect local area networks to the backbone. The architecture is now used in enterprise networks.